

The Ocean Road (Runrig)

Intro: C

I walked out, one morning fair, by the ocean road to linger there.
 And the sun was up, I saw sea of blue, but it was night in my heart for you.

And the tuning wave filled my empty thoughts with a homing power that washed a sea of loss.
 I saw my light, I held the flame that we should take this road again.

Once more, and I can see it all again like I was young, strong in heart and dreams.
 Once more I'm staking all that's real where the waters washed us clear.

Soaring like a bird, where do we go? Where do we go?
 On and over all we know, where do we go? Where do we go?

Still the ocean rolled round this smallest sphere through an endless void, to fade and disappear.
 Our fickle hearts sat down in time for the fleeting beat of a last divide.

Once more, and I can see it all again like I was young, strong in heart and dreams.
 Once more I'm staking all that's real where the waters washed us clear.

Soaring like a bird, where do we go? Where do we go?
 On and over all we know, where do we go? Where do we go?
